Uniting the Champions of Wastewater

Water is the most vital renewable resource we have, and wastewater is no different. As it drains from our communities, wastewater is primed for resource recovery. Thanks to today's sophisticated technology and dedicated professionals, treated wastewater can be revitalized to continue serving Californians. This essential lifecycle starts with people like you.

The California Water Environment Association (CWEA) is a trusted organization that advocates for and empowers wastewater professionals like you, so you can shape the future of California's most critical resource. We recognize the vital public service you provide your community and environment, and our collaborative CWEA community of like-minded professionals can help you feel supported, empowered, and proud throughout your wastewater career.

While we help you build the skills you need to succeed, a strong local and statewide network of wastewater professionals also stands ready to support your growth. Spread across the state, our 17 Local Sections offer the opportunity to connect directly with the wastewater professional nearest to you and champion wastewater in your community.

From professional training events and certifications to collaborative networking and leadership opportunities, CWEA has the tools and support network to help you thrive.

Giving You Tools to Succeed

CWEA is the only organization that unites wastewater professionals across California. Whether you're just getting started as a student or have decades of experience, you'll benefit from the opportunity to work closely with your fellow wastewater professionals.

No matter your career stage in wastewater, CWEA is here for you with benefits including:

GETTING STARTED

An entry point for students to learn about careers, meet professionals who can mentor them through their career journey, and learn about the exciting future of wastewater and resource recovery.

“As a student, I never thought of working with wastewater until a field trip to our local treatment plant. Now I introduce other students to this field through my involvement with CWEA.”

–Jennifer Ku, P.E., East Bay Municipal Utility District

LOCAL SECTIONS

Convenient and accessible opportunities to engage on a local level through meetings and trainings with Local Sections.

“It’s important to get involved with the local sections, they offer great programs to help you participate at the local level. My CWEA membership has paid off both professionally and politically – I was an officer at both the state level and with the national organization.”

–Fran Forkas, CWEA Life Member and 1989 President

CAREER GROWTH

Resources for professional growth, such as certifications, training, leadership opportunities, and cross-industry networking.

“I cannot overemphasize the importance of networking. The more people you meet and talk to, the more opportunities will come your way. CWEA expands horizons and presents untold opportunities.”

–Howard Brewen, (retired) Superintendent, City of San Luis Obispo

LEADERSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

An inclusive, collaborative community of professionals spanning roles, career stages, and regions.

“If you learn to be a good leader to volunteers, you’re going to be a terrific leader on the job. There is no better organization to build relationships and to develop your leadership skills than CWEA.”

COMMON QUESTIONS

Who is invited to join a Local Section?

Focusing specifically on your community, our 17 Local Sections are an easy way to get involved. Each section hosts regular meetings, workshops, and tours. All members can join one local section of their choice, with the option to join additional sections for a small fee.

What are my options for paying dues?

You may pay your membership dues independently or via your agency.

Can an agency
pay for a group of members all at the same time?

Agencies can pay for multiple employee memberships at once with a single check. The Agency should simply attach a list of the names of all individuals covered by the payment. We can sync the renewal date for an agency so all members can renew at the same time.
